MOVING DAY FOR PYGMIES

Little Black Africans Forced to Find New Home by Green-Eyed Monster.

WANTED—A location for the pygmies at the World's Fair.

This is the form of an advertisement which likely will be posted in order to get an advantageous site for the pygmies at the World's Fair grounds.

The proposition is a new one to the pygmies. In the jungle at home, the little black Africans say, such a question as trouble over a choice selection of real estate on which to build a home is never thought of.

The first site selected for the pygmies was innocently settled by the Chicago Indians and the hairy Ainos from Japan for their vegetable garden. When the pygmies arrived, instead of finding the "beautiful garden spot," they had dreamed of, they saw nothing but a few half-grown stalks of corn and uninteresting looking green bushes, which they were told were the American beans.

"Nothing was doing in the real estate line in that quarter for the pygmies," disappointed, but not despairing, they pitched their tent on the top of Indian Hill, the highest point at the World's Fair.

Then trouble began for the pygmies. The wind on chilly nights swept over this, the highest point at the World's Fair, the little pygmies shivered.

By gestures and excellent imitations of a silvering man, the pygmies made the misfortune understood to the kind-hearted wife of Red Bird, one of the Sioux chiefs and retainers.

Mrs. Red Bird loaned them one of the reservation blankets. Red Bird watched this procedure in silent silence. The green-eyed monster took possession of him. He was angry, and he was angry with the pygmies. He resented this and next morning refused to prepare his breakfast. The relations became strained until finally one day recently Doctor Sims, in charge of the Indians, learned of the affair and patched up a truce.

But Red Bird, who has confided his troubles to the other pygmies, has excited a spirit of enmity in camp directed at the little innocent pygmies. The chiefs do not look with much favor on their next-door neighbors, and the little pygmies who have felt the snub, are willing to move into the next block.

That is, arrangements are being made to move the pygmy camp to a site just below the Alaskan Indians, in the bottom, where the cold winds will be less noticeable and the opportunity for flirting with the women will be reduced to a minimum.

LOG FLOATER TO VISIT FAIR.
Master of Queer Craft Casts Anchor for a Week.

Jack McCaffery, who landed in North St. Louis Sunday night after floating down the river from Keokuk on a log, will remain in St. Louis a week to see the Fair and the city. He expected to land yesterday morning at the foot of Pine street, thus giving to St. Louis people an opportunity of watching him navigate his strange craft. But he decided that his trip of 202 miles was long enough and anchored for the week just below Merchants' bridge.

McCaffery left Keokuk on his trip Sunday morning, July 31. He traveled only a few days, and met with several delays, which accounts for his reaching St. Louis one day behind his scheduled time. He has had several short trips of this kind before, but never one of such length. He is an old logger, having been in the employ of the American Lumber Company of Keokuk for many years and engaged in piloting rafts of logs down the Mississippi.

PRINTERS' CONVENTION OPENED; WOMEN'S AUXILIARY MEETS TO-DAY

MRS. FRANK A. KENNEDY,
International President of the Women's Auxiliary.

The fifteenth annual convention of the International Typographical Union was opened yesterday at Convention Hall on the World's Fair grounds. After considerable delay, caused by a mistake in the arrangements for admission of the delegates, the meeting was called to order by M. E. H. Witter, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

After an invocation by the Very Reverend Dean C. M. Davis, Mr. Witter called J. M. Lynch, international president, to the chair. The first day's business was purely formal. The chairman announced that the committee on Credentials would consist of Delegates Anderson of Macdon, Ga.; Parsons of Washington, D. C.; M. J. Scherz of Cincinnati, Smiler of Newark, N. J., and Forster of San Francisco. Few cases will come before the Credentials Committee and its duties will be chiefly to judge of the merits of the applications of new members for representation.

The committee on Constitution and By-Laws consists of Chas. G. Smith, Morehouse of Springfield, O.; Booth of Richmond, Va.; Kuhn of Vincennes, Ind.; and Booth of St. Louis.

G. Gosler, delegate from Manila, P. I., presented to the chairman a report and book made of wood from the Philippines. A telegram from Governor Dwyer, saying that the train was through late and that he would be unable to speak at this session, was read. It was to have been the first of a series of telegrams from the delegates on behalf of the International Typographical Union.

The convention adjourned to meet this morning at 9 o'clock. The second annual convention of the National International Auxiliary will begin this morning at the Bourse Hotel. Mrs. Frank A. Kennedy, president, will preside over the meeting.

MADE TRIP TO THE FAIR IN A GASOLINE LAUNCH.
Kansas City Men Spent Six Days on the Missouri River on Journey to St. Louis.

A party of five men from Kansas City, who came to St. Louis to see the Fair, arrived yesterday afternoon, having made the trip down the Missouri River in a gasoline launch.

The party consisted of Doctor J. J. Auerbach, H. C. Newcomer, Robert Hamilton, Ed. Watts and R. Howard. They were joined by B. H. Montgomery of St. Louis and Samuel Lewis and Leslie Hickox of Kansas City, who came to St. Louis by rail. The party went into camp on the river bank at East St. Louis. They will remain here about two weeks, camping out all the time and visiting the Fair daily.

The launch, which is called the "Newcomer," left Kansas City last Tuesday. It was managed by H. C. Newcomer and the crew consisted of the party. The launch arrived here at 1 p. m., exactly six days from the time she started.

NECKLACES ARE IN VOGUE.
This is decidedly a necklace season. Pearl collars are worn in the daytime with neckties, and diamonds and rubies are worn in the evening. The most popular of the afternoon toilet. But the new fashion is a necklace of pearls, diamonds, and rubies, which is worn with a low-cut dress. This is a very handsome one to see at the fair. REFUSED TO ADOPT JOURDAN PLANKS

Republican State Convention, Like the Democratic, Failed to See Their Propriety

IGNORED IN THE PLATFORM.

Resolutions Committee Framed Home-Rule Wording of Its Own for Passage by the Republicans.

Since the State conventions, Republican newspapers have been saying much about the refusal of the Democratic Convention to accept the so-called Jordan planks written by Morton Jordan of St. Louis. According to one of the Republican State leaders, the Jordan planks were also turned down by the Republican Convention.

According to this Republican, the same planks, brought from the Democratic Convention, were taken to St. Joseph. They were given to Assistant United States District Attorney Bert D. Norton, who was taking a leading part in the preparations of the convention.

One of these planks provided that the chief of the State should not be "called as subject provinces" and that the Governor should not have the right to "confirmation, veto or appointment" a proposition which would make the police officer without State supervision of any sort. The other plank fixed the compensation of the Excise Commissioner at $500.

When Mr. Norton received the copy of the planks, in typewritten manuscript, a committee which had been appointed by the then State chairman, T. J. Atkins, was working on the platform. It was headed by Harry H. Mitchell of Clinton.

Among his assistants were W. J. Sewall of Cottage, Richard Dalton of Pike County, Charles Nagel of St. Louis and others equally well known.

The Jordan planks were presented to the committee. It was found that practically the same planks, culled from the newspaper accounts of the Democratic Convention, had been presented in printed form by E. C. Brokner, editor of the State Republican.

When the Resolutions Committee of the convention was named at the first morning session of the convention, it met that afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Jefferson Hotel. The Metropolitan Hotel, where the Democratic Convention was held, was the scene of the meeting.

All of the typewritten matter that had been presented to the informal committee on platform was turned over to the Resolutions Committee by Mr. Mitchell. The Resolutions Committee refused to adopt the Jordan planks, but instead adopted a plank adopted by the Democratic Convention, which provided that the chief of the State should not be "called as subject provinces" and that the Governor should not have the right to "confirmation, veto or appointment" a proposition which would make the police officer without State supervision of any sort.

"These are the facts in the case," said the Republican yesterday. "We do not believe in the Jordan planks. We have too much experience with Republicans refusing to stand on our planks. We have too much experience with Republicans refusing to stand on our planks. We have too much experience with Republicans refusing to stand on our planks."

WHITECOTTON IS RENOMINATED.
Democrats of Monroe County in Primary Select Him for the Legislature.

Tate, Mo., Aug. 8.—The latest returns from the Democratic primary held in Monroe County Saturday show that Speaker Whitecotton has been renominated, defeating his opponent, J. H. Reynolds, by about 500 votes.

The campaign was a bitter one, and the race is considered close. Reynolds attacked Whitecotton's record in the last year, and Whitecotton was connected with the Howard Sharp case.

W. M. Farrell, chairman of the County Central Committee, who was the most prominent man in urging that the County Committee have the right to select the delegates, was re-elected by a vote of two to one.

Filing Democratic Delegates.
Filing of delegates for the Democratic primaries will close on August 20, and all changes in the personnel must be made by August 20. The primary takes place on October 2, and the convention on October 4.

At Kansas City she will join a band of fifty missionaries, all bound for the northern parts of China, under the leadership of the Reverend Horace W. Holding.

The entire party will spend two months in Los Angeles, Cal., during which time they will be drilled in the rudimentary work of their chosen profession, and about the 1st of November they will embark for Tai-Ming-Foo, where the headquarters of the Northern China missions are located.

Just what particular work she will engage in, Miss Green as yet does not know, but is hopeful that Doctor Holding will be enabled to carry out his cherished wish of founding a hospital within the very near future, when she expects to devote her time to caring for the sick.

Miss Green is the first young lady of West Presbyterian Church to become imbued with the missionary spirit, and she considers her calling all the more an honor because of this fact.
